Hurricane Takes Westward Swing

Tides Pound State, Texas Coast Areas

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Hurricane Carla, a "large and dangerous" storm affecting the entire Gulf of Mexico, Friday night rumbled toward land, pushing high tides to the Louisiana and Texas coasts.

The weather bureau in New Orleans, in a bulletin at 7 p.m. (CST), pinpointed Carla about 420 miles south of New Orleans.

125 MPH WINDS
The bulletin said Carla was moving between northwest and west-northwest about 10 miles per hour with highest winds estimated at 125 miles per hour near the center.

There was little likelihood that the storm would change either speed or direction in the next 12 to 24 hours, the weather bureau said.

Weather bureau forecaster G. L. Allen said a high pressure area sitting over most of the eastern United States was holding Carla westward swing.

"If she doesn't slow down in the Gulf," he said, "we very likely won't get too much out of it here."

However, if Carla slows down long enough to let that high pressure cell break up, then she might start this way again.

Tides were about three feet above normal on the Louisiana and Texas coasts, the bulletin warned, and the bureau cautioned persons in low-lying lands to seek refuge before escape routes were closed.

At Cameron, laid waste with 500 killed by Hurricane Audrey in 1957, the sheriff's office reported 3,000 persons had evacuated with most of them taken to Lake Charles, about 30 miles inland.

Louisiana marshalled its disaster forces while scattered residents of the swampy coastal perimeter in the path of rising tides began moving to higher ground.

"Steps have been taken for evacuation and rescue measures if they become necessary," said (Continued On Page Two-A)

Suit Filed On School Barricades

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two New Orleans women Friday filed suit against Mayor Victor Schiro and police Supt. Joseph Giarrusso, contending that police barricades at desegregated schools violate their constitutional rights.

Mrs. Bernard J. Gailiot and Miss Evelyn Jahneke asked the civil district court to issue an injunction stopping such practices.

City authorities ordered barricades at the six schools on opening day Thursday to prevent demonstrations such as occurred at two desegregated schools last year.

The suit contended Schiro and Giarrusso are denying people "their right of peaceful assembly, remonstrance, freedom of speech, and of religion, all as guaranteed by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution."

Mrs. Gailiot and Miss Jahneke said they tried to approach the William Frantz school Thursday, but were stopped some distance from the school by a police captain and ordered to leave the area and stop remonstrating their protest to integration of the races at any of the public schools.

Judge Rene Viosca ordered a preliminary hearing for 10:30 a.m. Sept. 14 for Schiro and Giarrusso to show cause why the injunction asked should not be issued.

Airline Strike Threat Erased

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Threat of a strike by 60 Trans World Airlines navigators which would have shut down the entire airline this weekend was erased Friday night when the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) agreed to put off final tests of a new navigation device.

A spokesman for the air transport division of the Transport Workers Union (AFL-CIO) said a temporary agreement was reached in negotiations with TWA officials in New York.

The FAA agreed to put off until Sept. 16 the start of final tests on the all-electronic radar navigation device for overseas flights.

Soviet Leader Gets Brushoff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Friday night the United States expects East-West talks on the Berlin crisis as soon as the Russians show they are ready for "negotiations of a serious and constructive character."

Rusk said it was unbelievable the Kremlin could press so dangerous an issue "without full exploration with all whose interests and pledges are involved."

The secretary spoke out on Berlin after the White House brushed off as a cynical propaganda gesture Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's offer for an unprepared summit meeting with President Kennedy under the shadow of Soviet threats.

RESIST PRESSURE
An administration official said Kennedy intends to resist pressure for a meeting with Khrushchev as long as the Kremlin leader demands that the West negotiate away its rights in Berlin.

This official said there was no basis for negotiations as long as the premier insisted on surrendering control of Western access to Berlin to the whim of the Communist East Germans.

In this connection, the United States, Britain and France warned Russia Friday "in the most solemn terms" against any interference with civil air traffic through the Berlin corridors.

Rusk said Friday night that diplomatic channels exist between Moscow and the West and "they are not being neglected." He said the problem was whether the diplomatic contacts "can lead to a meeting of minds, whether peace is a common purpose."

The secretary spoke at a dinner given by the Association of the United States Army in honor of President Kennedy's disarmament adviser, John J. McCloy.

Identical Allied notes were delivered to the Kremlin as the Hamburg newspaper Bild Zeitung reported that the East German air force might hold maneuvers in the corridors to test Allied determination to keep the routes open.

The Western notes said that any change in the air traffic situation "will be the result of aggressive action against established rights by the Soviet government and the East German regime."

LEAVES PILOT BEHIND

Plane Soars Wild 2 Hours, Crashes

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP)—A Civil Air Patrol plane zoomed out of control of its operator and soared pilotless for two hours before crashing into an Illinois field Friday.

The small plane brought apprehension and excitement to this eastern Iowa city of 34,000 persons for about an hour as it banked steeply over the downtown and residential areas.

Then the silver, two-passenger plane went into an erratic north-east course and climbed to 12,000 feet before it descended into a field a quarter of a mile west of Aledo, Ill.

Doren Bumgardner, 29, a member of the Burlington CAP squadron, was preparing to start the plane at Municipal Airport by twirling the propeller.

The plane had blocks in front of the wheels, but somehow it broke loose.

Bumgardner hung onto the plane and was dragged for some distance before letting go. He was taken to Mercy Hospital for treatment of leg abrasions.

Gordon Haxton, Ozark Air Lines station agent, said the plane went about 10 feet into the air and "kind of whipped around for a while, then it gained altitude and flew north."

The plane had a full tank of gas, equivalent of a maximum of 2½ hours of flying time.

The craft climbed into the gray haze and soared lazily over the city at 1,200 feet. Fire trucks and police cars hurried through the city, notifying residents of the possible danger.

School children were ordered to stay in their buildings until the police gave an all clear. But Burlington Community College evacuated its 450 students and faculty.

Senate Votes Disarmament Agency Plan

Armed Services Chairman Loses Opposition Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Friday voted 73-14 to create a new disarmament agency as President Kennedy had requested.

In a special message last June 29, the President asked Congress to create the agency—first of its kind in the world—"for world peace and security."

UP TO HOUSE
The House still must act on the request. Chances were slim that it can be considered before Congress adjourns this year.

The Senate bill would create a "U.S. arms control and disarmament agency" within the State Department. It would conduct research and studies in disarmament and coordinate the work of other government agencies in the same field. The agency director would be the principal adviser to the president and the secretary of state on disarmament matters.

The Senate bill carries an appropriation of $10 million to get the agency started.

Opponents in the Senate argued that now was not the time to set up such an agency.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, opposed passing the bill "at a time we are summoning the free men of the world to arm themselves" for defense.

Russell said it was more likely to provoke war than help bring peace by leading "our adversary" to believe "we are so confused we are going off in both directions at once" by a major defense buildup and creation of a disarmament agency.

Proponents of the bill argued that with Khrushchev's action in resuming nuclear weapons testing in the atmosphere this is the time to make clear this country's peaceful intentions even as it builds up its arms.

Before passing the bill, the Senate killed 34-33, a motion by Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., the GOP minority leader, to send the bill back to the Armed Services Committee with instructions for a report by next Feb. 1.

BLOCKS FIX
The Senate investigations subcommittee heard Byers shortly after an Oregon football player reported he blocked an effort to fix the 1960 Oregon-Michigan game.

Michael Bruce, 20, senior defensive halfback for Oregon, pointed out another witness, Frank Norman Rosenthal, as one of two men he said made the $5,000 bribe offer on the eve of the game at Ann Arbor, Mich.

An effort which brought only one arrest and a minor fine.

Byers submitted a statement that the NCAA favors a pending bill by Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., which would make sports bribery a federal offense. This legislation would provide for a maximum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment and a $5,000 fine. But Byers said probably this is not strong enough.

Byers testified that professional gamblers are invading the campuses by inducing students to act as agents in bribe attempts and by hiring students to sell parlay cards on college and professional football and baseball games.

Rosenthal, a Miami Beach gambler, stared impassively as Bruce leveled a finger at him. Then he invoked the 5th Amendment's protection against self-incrimination and refused to talk when Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., asked him about the incident.

Subsequent testimony indicated that by the time police, alerted by Bruce via the Oregon coaches, reached the hotel, Rosenthal had left and apparently never was arrested. His companion, named as David Budin, was arrested on a charge of registering at the hotel.

Allies Scorn Soviet Views Over Berlin

LONDON (AP) — Government officials in Britain and France Friday night scornfully rejected Nikita Khrushchev's assertion that their countries will knuckle under on Berlin in the face of Soviet nuclear might.

The Soviet premier's view was reported in the New York Times. The newspaper quoted him Friday as saying in an interview these nations "figuratively speaking are hostages to us" because they would refuse to join the United States in a war over Berlin for fear of nuclear destruction.

UNDER ILLUSION
An authorized British source said: "If Khrushchev really believes this he is under a dangerous illusion."

"The British government and people mean to fulfill their engagements over Berlin—even to the point of war."

Defense Minister Harold Watkinson is expected to affirm this stand publicly Saturday.

In Paris, officials recalled the tough declaration of French policy on Berlin by President Charles de Gaulle only Tuesday.

"The Allies must maintain their positions by force" if Russia seeks by force to cut the communications of the Western powers in Berlin.

In Rome incredulity was the official Italian reaction.

A spokesman at the office of Premier Amintore Fanfani, said Khrushchev's words echoed the phrasing of a propaganda rally.

The spokesman added that Fanfani explained to the Soviet leader "with the utmost clarity" the position of the Italian government during talks in Moscow in August.

"We are staunch allies of the Western bloc," the spokesman quoted Fanfani as telling Khrushchev.

Senator Soaper Says

We'll miss the cheery tinkle of the ice cream truck's bell, even more so since this is not an election year and the candidate's loudspeaker won't be around to fill the gap.

East German armored vehicles use water hoses as a weapon. Any hope that a third war would be fought with squirt guns, however, is premature.

The nation's great airlines report financial difficulties. We had noticed that they apparently were no longer able even to afford propellers for every plane.

Last year's kindergartners can hardly wait for school to start. As first graders they will, at last, have somebody to feel superior to.

New Ruling Leaves Heir Extra Wife

ATLANTA (UPI)—Tobacco millionaire Richard J. Reynolds apparently was left with two wives Friday by a Georgia Supreme Court ruling that one of his discarded spouses is entitled to a new divorce trial.

In an 87-page opinion written by Justice T. Grady Head, the Georgia high court cited numerous instances in which the McIntosh County Superior Court erred when Reynolds was granted a divorce on May 16, 1960, from Mrs. Muriel Marston Reynolds of Toronto, Canada, and New York City.

The ruling noted that one of the errors made by trial Judge Henry Durrance was his action in permitting Reynolds, heir to the Camel cigarette fortune, to obtain his divorce from his home on Sepele Island, Ga., giving testimony only through depositions.

Reynolds acquired wife number four last March 15 while taking a cruise in the China Sea. He married Dr. Anne Marie Schmitt, a German philosophy professor whom Reynolds said he met while recovering from an illness in Germany last year.

Reynolds could not be reached immediately for comment. It was understood he and his new wife were visiting somewhere in West Germany.

Gloria Bunch Fund Hits $6300-Mark

Eighty contributions — 45 of them from outside the Twin Cities — boosted the Gloria Bunch Fund to $6,389.44 Friday.

The drive, to help a young local couple pay several thousand dollars worth of medical bills and purchase a home, ends tomorrow.

W. E. Whetstone, Monroe civic leader who learned of the T. F. Bunch Jr. family's plight, has chaired the drive.

Contributions yesterday totaled $488.59.

Marion residents led the list of out-of-town contributors Friday, with 24 donations. Lake Providence was next with seven.

One donation came from Fort Dix, New Jersey, and another out-of-stater was from Greenville, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. Bunch learned last December that their younger daughter, Gloria, five, has a brain tumor.

Since then, despite extensive medical treatment, the youngster has gone into a coma, and her parents sold their home to pay mounting medical bills.

Surgery is impossible since the tumor is located under brain tissue. It is affecting her respiratory system, and Gloria has stopped breathing several times.

The family is residing with Bunch's parents at 312 Hadley St.

Although the drive ends tomorrow, anyone who wants to help the family may send contributions to W. E. Whetstone, district manager, Southern Bell Telephone Co., 316 Broad St., Monroe, for the "Gloria Bunch Fund," and the money will be turned over to Jmr. and Mrs. Bunch.

40,000 Men May Receive Orders Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is about to order perhaps 40,000 men overseas to reinforce Army troops in Germany, it was learned Friday night.

Announcement of this action may come Saturday.

TO START SOON
The reinforcements will start moving as soon as possible, sources said. They estimated the first elements might not be ready to go until Oct. 1.

This is another stage in the step-by-step military buildup spurred by the developing crisis over Berlin.

Earlier Friday, it was disclosed that the Army is shipping armored personnel carriers to give U.S. infantry forces in Germany greater mobility and maneuverability.

This stepped-up mechanization is intended to equip U.S. soldiers better to meet on equal terms the highly mechanized Soviet forces they face along the tense Iron Curtain.

American forces in Europe now total about 250,000.

At the core are five combat-ready infantry and armored divisions deployed in Western Germany.

It was understood that reinforcements for the U.S. divisions now in Germany would comprise individual men to fill out understrength units and some whole units to provide combat support and logistics support.

Combat support units generally are signal, engineer, supplementary artillery and the like. Logistics support units are medical, quartermaster, ordnance, and so on.

Some time ago, Gen. Lauris Norstad, supreme Allied commander in Europe, asked the Pentagon for 38,000 support-type troops to round out the 7th Army.

On Aug. 11, the Army announced 3,000 troops would cross the Atlantic. At the time, it was said additional men would be trained to follow for the same purpose.

Speaking at an Army Association meeting Friday, Gen. George H. Decker, Army chief of staff, disclosed that 1,000 new men were being assigned to each of the (Continued On Page Two-A)

Trout Man Fatally Hurt In Mishap

JENA (Special) — Charlie W. Whitley, 51, of route one, Trout, was killed shortly after 7 p.m. Friday when he stepped into the path of an automobile about 11 miles south of Jena on the Jena - Alexandria highway.

Driver of the car, Willie L. Blackwell, 40, of Alexandria, said that he was meeting another car at the time of the accident and was momentarily blinded.

Whitley reportedly stepped from the west side of the road and was struck just past the center line by the left front fender. Death was believed to have been instantaneous. He was flung to the shoulder on the opposite side of the road.

The body was taken to Riser and Sons Funeral Home in Columbia where arrangements last night were incomplete.

Heading south, Blackwell said he was going about 40 miles per hour when the incident occurred.

Investigating were agents of the LaSalle Parish sheriff's department and state police.

Armed Services Chairman Loses Opposition Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Friday voted 73-14 to create a new disarmament agency as President Kennedy had requested.

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP)—President Joao Goulart Friday night established a coalition Cabinet headed by politico-businessman Tancredo Neves to operate Brazil's new parliamentary-type government.

His setup won overwhelming congressional approval after congressmen from his own south Brazilian home range country protested the middle-roader character of the Cabinet.

Congress voted 259-22 in favor of Neves to hold the top post of prime minister and 246-10 for the overall Cabinet.

The key posts of foreign minister and finance minister went to Francisco San Tiago Dantas and Walter Moreira Salles, respectively.

Ruy Ramos, a deputy in Goulart's Labor party, charged that the Cabinet contained members who either had betrayed the Labor party or had sold out to foreign capitalists. Ramos accused Moreira Salles of having too close ties with Wall Street.

The protests ended when Croacy de Oliveira, Labor party deputy, read a dramatic appeal by Goulart urging Congress to go on with the vote.

Before the balloting, another Labor deputy, Gerardo Ferrari, declared he soon will introduce a bill calling for a national referendum on wiping out the parliamentary system with 90 days.

To eliminate rightist military opposition to Goulart, Congress had approved a constitutional amendment taking most of the powers from the presidency and giving them to a prime minister under the parliamentary system.

Marshal Serves 3 State Officials

BATON ROUGE (AP) — A deputy federal marshal Friday served three top Louisiana officials with notices of the U.S. attorney's move to block St. Bernard Parish from accepting white students who boycott desegregated New Orleans schools.

The deputy from New Orleans, who did not give his name, served personally Supt. Shelby M. Jackson and state Treasurer A. P. Tugwell.

He said the office of state Comptroller Roy Theriot accepted service for Theriot.

SEEK OTHERS — Jackson later asserted, "the serving of these documents is further evidence of the determined effort of certain federal authorities to take over public education in Louisiana and the South . . ."

The deputy marshal also sought out William J. Dodd, Baton Rouge member of the 11-member state Board of Education, while other federal deputy marshals elsewhere in the state, he said, sought other board members who are all named in the federal motion.

The St. Bernard Parish School Board members and Supt. Joseph Davies of St. Bernard, who also is a state board member, also will be served, the deputy marshal said.

Last week U.S. Atty. M. Hepburn Many in New Orleans filed a motion asking for a federal court restraining order to prevent racial discrimination in St. Bernard schools while the parish accepted students from desegregated New Orleans schools.

The motion also asked an injunction against the three state officials and the State Education Board, preventing them from withholding state funds from desegregated New Orleans schools

Gloria Bunch Fund Hits $6300-Mark

Eighty contributions — 45 of them from outside the Twin Cities — boosted the Gloria Bunch Fund to $6,389.44 Friday.

The drive, to help a young local couple pay several thousand dollars worth of medical bills and purchase a home, ended tomorrow.

W. E. Whetstone, Monroe civic leader who learned of the T. F. Bunch Jr. family's plight, has chairmanned the drive.

Contributions yesterday totalled $488.59.

Marion residents led the list of out-of-town contributors Friday, with 24 donations. Lake Providence was next with seven. One donation came from Fort Dix, New Jersey, and another out-of-stater was from Greenville, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. Bunch learned last December that their younger daughter, Gloria, five, has a brain tumor.

40,000 Men May Receive Orders Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is about to order perhaps 40,000 men overseas to reinforce Army troops in Germany, it was learned Friday night.

Announcement of this action may come Saturday.

TO START SOON — The reinforcements will start moving as soon as possible, sources said. They estimated the first elements might not be ready to go until Oct. 1.

This is another stage in the step-by-step military buildup spurred by the developing crisis over Berlin.

Earlier Friday, it was disclosed that the Army is shipping armored personnel carriers to give U.S. infantry forces in Germany greater mobility and maneuverability.

This stepped-up mechanization is intended to equip U.S. soldiers better to meet on equal terms the highly mechanized Soviet forces they face along the tense Iron Curtain.

American forces in Europe now total about 250,000.

At the core are five combat-ready infantry and armored divisions deployed in Western Germany.

It was understood that reinforcements for the U.S. divisions now in Germany would comprise individual men to fill out understrength units and some whole units to provide combat support and logistics support.

Combat support units generally are signal, engineer, supplementary artillery and the like. Logistics support units are medical, quartermaster, ordnance, and so on.

Some time ago, Gen. Lauris Norstad, supreme Allied commander in Europe, asked the Pentagon for 35,000 support-type troops to round out the 7th Army.

On Aug. 11, the Army announced 3,000 troops would cross the Atlantic. At the time, it was said additional men would be trained to follow for the same purpose.

Speaking at an Army Association meeting Friday, Gen. George H. Decker, Army chief of staff, disclosed that 1,000 new men were being assigned to each of the

Trout Man Fatally Hurt In Mishap

JENA (Special) — Charlie W. Whitley, 81, of route one, Trout, was killed shortly after 7 p.m. Friday when he stepped into the path of an automobile about 11 miles south of Jena on the Jena-Alexandria highway.

Driver of the car, Willie L. Blackwell, 40, of Alexandria, said that he was meeting another car at the time of the accident and was momentarily blinded.

Whitley reportedly stepped from the west side of the road and was struck just past the center line by the left front fender. Death was believed to have been instantaneous. He was flung to the shoulder on the opposite side of the road.

The body was taken to Risen and Sons Funeral Home in Columbia where arrangements last night were incomplete.

Heading south, Blackwell said he was going about 40 miles per hour when the incident occurred.

Investigating were agents of the LaSalle Parish sheriff's department and state police.

Pierre Salinger pointed out that such offers have been made in public statements, not directly to the President through diplomatic channels.

Next week, Kennedy will discuss Berlin and other trouble spots with Presidents Sukarno of Indonesia and Keita of Mali, who undoubtedly will voice pleas from neutral nations that an East-West summit meeting be called on the Berlin issue. But there was no indication the President was receptive to the idea of seeing Khrushchev.

Other developments in the crisis included:

—NATO Secretary General Dirk U. Stikker, here for strategy talks with U.S. officials, said a war over Berlin would be "absolutely foolish." But he said NATO will fight if the Communists start shooting.

—Stikker quoted NATO's commander-in-chief, Gen. Lauris Norstad, as saying "If anything happens, I have the means to fight and I'll damned well fight."

—The White House accused the Kremlin of preparing to renew atomic tests even while talking test ban possibilities at Geneva.

—Some U.S. officials said Khrushchev's latest statements offered at least some hope that the Premier might be leaning toward another East-West foreign ministers meeting to take up some phases of the Berlin problem.

under a false name.

Budin was fined $100 on the false-registering charge. Subcommittee counsel identified him as a former New York school teacher who was involved in a basketball fix scandal and was fired from his school job.

Detective Lt. Carl Robinson, chief of the Michigan State Police Rackets Squad, said he did not know until Friday that Rosenthal was the man with Budin.

Robinson testified that one trouble the police had in trying to develop the case was Bruce's unwillingness to testify. The detective told newsmen later that Bruce didn't want to go into court because he was publicity-shy.

Bruce, son of 6th grad.

Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce of El Cajon, Calif., was warmly complimented by McClellan for his integrity and his courage in testifying at the hearings intended to determine whether gamblers have corrupted any college football teams in the way they have some college basketball players.

Before Bruce's previously unannounced and dramatic appearance, the subcommittee heard a Florida officer tell about a bribery effort that was broken up by a University of Florida pullback. This case brought a jail sentence to the gambler involved and the more intensive training starting at once. Arrangements also were made to build up their strength from the ready reserve reinforcement pool.

three infantry divisions in Germany, the 2nd, 8th and 24th.

Dicker said this will permit the 7th Army to man and maintain an additional number of armored personnel carriers which they will be provided to improve their mechanized strength.

Shipment of these 3,000 troops and the lightweight, amphibious, air-transportable troop carriers is under way, the Army chief said. The number of these troop carriers was not given.

As the East-West dispute over Berlin draws nearer an expected showdown later this year, the Pentagon has been taking a series of actions to bolster U.S. fighting power.

Earlier this week, the Army issued notice on four National Guard divisions—three infantry and one armored—that they may be called up.

These four divisions, plus 475 other smaller Guard and Reserve units, were ordered to undergo the more intensive training starting at once. Arrangements also were made to build up their strength from the ready reserve reinforcement pool.

Gov. Jimmie H. Davis.

He said the Louisiana National Guard and Civil Defense workers had been placed on a 24-hour standby alert.

Crop experts said Carla could ruin Louisiana's $5 million rice crop that is only three weeks from harvest.

Dave Pearce, state agriculture commissioner, said the corn and cane crops faced a similar threat.

While Carla plowed through the Gulf, Hurricane Betsy rilled through the Atlantic Ocean off the Massachusetts coast. Betsy's highest winds were estimated at 125 miles per hour, but the storm seemed to be hanging in one spot several hundred miles offshore.

Tropical storm Debbie, with winds up to 70 miles per hour, was also in the Atlantic near the Cape Verde Island group, but was moving slowly westward.

The Red Cross at New Orleans imported 10 disaster experts from other points in southeastern states and said residents began evacuating Grand Isle, La., at 7 a.m. Friday. Grand Isle is a supply center for offshore oil rigs and a resort area 50 miles south of New Orleans at land's end.

Evacuation centers went up at Lockport and Raceland to accommodate Louisiana coastal residents fleeing the storm's path.

At Crowley, La., self-styled rice capital of the world, there was considerable worry over a $5 million rice crop that is just three weeks from harvesting. Crowley sources said 40 miles an hour winds could wreck the crop.

At Morgan City, 50 miles southwest of New Orleans, police ordered evacuation of all areas outside the city which is completely sealed by levees.

On the Mississippi Gulf Coast—dotted with lavish resort spots—representatives of the Red Cross, Civil Defense and local officials huddled on plans for possible evacuation.

At Biloxi, Miss., one of the coast's big resort centers, school Supt. R. D. Brown said schools could quickly be converted into housing units for evacuees.

At Keesler Air Force Base near Biloxi, one of the Air Force's biggest electronic centers with a complement of more than 20,000 men, a hurricane alert plan went into effect.

Keesler evacuated 13 planes today, sending them to Richards-Gedair Air Base, Mo., and ordered three other planes on a cross country flight not to return to Keesler.

Authorities at Keesler also ordered the radar station at Ship Island—12 miles off the Mississippi coast—evacuated by early this afternoon.

The Weather Bureau at Dallas warned all persons to stay off beaches around Corpus Christi, Tex.

The Brownsville, Tex., weather bureau issued a statement saying tides in the Brownsville area—close to the Mexican border—"are likely to equal those of Hurricane Audrey and if the storm moved in near here they possibly would approach heights reached in the great 1915 storm."

But, the Brownsville statement added, the "present thinking is that there is a good chance Carla will reach the coast between Lake Charles and Galveston or Freeport (Tex.) near or shortly after dark Saturday."

On the Mississippi Gulf Coast—dotted with lavish resort spots—representatives of the Red Cross, Civil Defense and local officials huddled on plans for possible evacuation.

FAA Orders Plane Checks By Airlines

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) Friday ordered eight airlines to inspect a key control linkage on certain constallation planes within the next 25 hours of flight time.

The FAA said it was acting on information uncovered in last Friday's crash of a Trans World Airlines Constellation near Chicago.

The telegraphed "airworthiness directive," which requires mandatory compliance, went to TWA, Eastern, National Pacific Northern, South Pacific, Flying Tiger, Seaboard World and Slick.

It said:

"As a result of findings during investigation of a recent Lockheed model 949 aircraft... the following special inspection is required at the first layover or stop where qualified maintenance personnel and facilities are available but not to exceed the next 25 hours time in service.

"Inspect to insure that the five bolts, nuts and cotter pins in the parallelogram linkage between the elevator boost valve and boost mechanism are properly secured and safetied."

This referred to the mechanism that allows a pilot to manipulate the elevators with hydraulic aids, similar to power steering on an automobile. An FAA spokesman said failure of the linkage would lock the elevators in a sudden, violent climb which in turn could send a plane into an uncontrollable stall.

The FAA emphasized that the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), which is directing investigation of the TWA crash, has not advised it that linkage failure caused the accident. The FAA spokesman would not go beyond the wording of the telegram, which included this line:

"Immediate effectiveness necessary because of safety emergency involved."

Nationalists Hope To Block Red China

News Commentary
By JOHN McNUTT

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Nationalist China's plans to label the admission of Communist China an "important" issue requiring a two-thirds majority in the General Assembly is one of several tactics being studied to keep Peiping out of the United Nations.

The Nationalist Chinese and their supporters, led by the United States, weighed this and other plans as they prepared for the opening of the 16th General Assembly Sept. 19.

Sources said that no firm program has yet been blueprinted.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

READER REACTION

It is refreshing to receive a letter from someone with no complaints about health. Mrs. R. is such. "I'm a 50 year old widow with the same size and shape I had at 19. I have two children and one grandchild. I don't knock myself out to prove I'm young, even tho I feel that way. I bowl, dance, swim, work and drive a sports car. I get regular medical checkups and have a nice job as a sales manager. I attribute my good fortune to hard work and my attitude toward life. I feel wonderful today even tho I was out dancing last night."

Hard work never killed anyone and this woman has many of the attitudes of people who live to be 90. They enjoy themselves, but in moderation. Luck also enters the picture because most of the long-lived have a favorable family tree. They think and act young.

Canker sores can be miserable, especially when they tend to recur. A Detroit nurse had trouble along this line and consulted a specialist who told her he was sure "it would turn out to be lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach — that it had never failed him yet."

The nurse found the advice helpful; the sores have not recurred since she started taking the acid. Her son had the same experience. Two cases do not solve the canker sore problem but the suggestion is being passed along for what it is worth.

A man from Ansonia, Conn., asked us to do a piece on the therapeutic value of working close to the soil. His reason? He had a nervous breakdown and his physician prescribed gardening. He writes: "My recovery exceeded my fondest expectations."

Hard work is involved in digging, cultivating, and planting a garden and many people forget the cares of the world when they are active physically.

Hard work releases pent up anger and resentment and promotes sleep. A rested mind is better able to think rationally and untangle mixed up emotions. Planting seeds is better than swallowing tranquilizers and it is a satisfying experience to watch flowers and vegetables grow. However, not every breakdown is cured by working the soil. If this were so, farmers and professional gardeners would be immune to emotional cracks.

Former Senator Enters Hospital

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Former Sen. Theodore Francis Green, 93, who at the time of his retirement last year was the oldest member of Congress, has entered Jane Brown Hospital with what was described as a "heart block."

His personal secretary, Edward J. Higgins, said he had been informed by the physician that the retired Democratic legislator was holding his own.

Green will be 94 years old on Oct. 2.

but ruled out another "moratorium."

Under this plan, the United States succeeded for 10 years in preventing the General Assembly from even discussing the admission of Communist China. But the margin has decreased year by year, reaching a low last autumn when only 42 nations supported the U.S. resolution. Thirty-four voted against it, and 22 abstained.

Since then, several nations have informed the United States that they can no longer support this line of defense.

EXPECT RESOLUTION
Reports from Taipei said Foreign Minister Shen Chang-huan will offer a resolution to make the admission of Communist China a matter of substance rather than procedure, therefore requiring a two-thirds vote.

But there were indications that this plan will be held in reserve while other tactics are tried.

One would be to keep China off the agenda entirely. The question is not among the 93 listed thus far for discussion in the forthcoming assembly. However, it may be raised at any time as an "urgent" matter if a simple majority of the assembly agrees.

If the China question is added to the agenda, Nationalist China hopes to bury it at the end of the list and resist efforts by the Soviet Union and other friends of Peiping to call it up out of turn.

Another plan is a call upon the General Assembly to appoint a special committee to study the question and report back in 1962. American sources predicted that Soviet resumption of nuclear tests and the Berlin crisis has made easier the task of those who want to bar China.

Some Afro-Asian and Latin American nations which only a few months ago favored the admission of Red China are now having second thoughts, one spokesman said.

Whatever the course it takes, China promises to be one of the issues most bitterly contested in the 16th General Assembly.

N.O. School Integration Quiet Affair

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Continued calm prevailed Friday at New Orleans' six desegregated public schools as white attendance increased slightly in three of the schools.

There were no demonstrations and no arrests — just the first day.

Eleven Negro students attended five of the schools. The 12th Negro school was sick and unable to attend her second grade class at William Frantz school.

More than 200 police were on hand at the six schools. However, they had nothing to do but watch. McDonogh No. 19, desegregated last year along with Frantz, continued with four white pupils along with the five Negroes. White pupils boycotted the school 100 per cent last year. Normally, 566 students would attend classes.

Three whites dropped out of Frantz today, leaving only 13 whites and no Negroes in class. Normal attendance is 466.

At the four schools desegregated yesterday, Judah P. Benjamin had the lowest attendance. Only 76 attended, compared to 83 on opening day and 236 last year.

Two Negroes are attending. At Andrew H. Wilson school, enrollment increased by six, to 362 with one Negro. Attendance last year was 429.

Robert H. Lusher school enrolled 17 new students, increasing attendance to 223 with two Negroes.

At McDonogh No. 11, enrollment jumped 19 to 194 with one Negro attending classes. Enrollment last year was 427.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tony Curtis is heading for South America where he will get a six figure salary for a picture. That's a far cry from the $100 he made working his last film.

Usually Curtis is among the highest paid actors in Hollywood, but he recently accepted a job as real life photographer on the set of "Soldiers Three" starring Paul Baskin; Eddie Woodward, Rayville; a sister, Mrs. Della Boone, West Monroe; 46 grandchildren; 16 great-grandchildren.

Palbearers will be grandsons Raymond Bradford, John McKenzie, Tommie Poindexter, Joe Poindexter, O. B. Mencom, Charles Gilley.

Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Peter Lawford.

Tony, an avid shutterbug, admits he only got $100 for four days work. And, he donated the salary to a philanthropic organization.

Curtis reported to work on the "Soldiers Three" set loaded down with cameras and filled with the seal of a professional photographer. However, his actor pals thought he was playing games.

"Frank and Dean couldn't understand what I was doing," Tony said. "The first day they were kind of bored. But, when they saw my work, they figured I knew what to do."

Curtis shot hundreds of pictures. One candid shot of Sinatra so impressed the singer-actor that he ordered three dozen prints for his personal use.

"Actually, the first day was my best because these guys thought I was fooling around and they were relaxed," he said. "After that it became work. They had their job to do as actors and I had mine as a photographer."

"I did have one advantage in shooting them that most photographers wouldn't have. I knew these guys personally and they knew I would destroy anything unfattering."

Curtis is leaving for the Argentine where he will costar with Yul Brynner in "Taras Bulba." He'll take along his wife, Janet Leigh, their two children and his camera equipment.

'Federal Aid' Hoax

The term "federal aid" is a misnomer. It looks good at first glance only because people and institutions do not consider their complete addresses.

Federal aid may seem to be a "grant" — almost a gift — to a new building or highway under construction near a certain city if the persons viewing the work think of themselves as citizens of that immediate area.

But such a person's full address would read: "Joe Blow, city of Monroe, parish of Ouachita, state of Louisiana, U. S. A." And each level of government exacts taxation from citizen "Joe." Any sort of federal aid used to assist a budget at another level comes from taxes paid by the same taxpayers.

For this reason, the term "federal aid" should be deleted from the vocabulary of sound thing and the words "taxpayers' aid" substituted. There is no such thing as "federal aid" since the federal government has no money of its own. Whatever money it gives away or spends it must take away from the people's earnings in taxes.

Not only individual citizens but those persons in charge of budgets at lower governmental levels have become obsessed with the idea of what appears to be "aid" from the federal government. Mayor W. L. Clack, Howard of Monroe pointed out the danger of cities seeking too much federal money while attending a meeting of the American Municipal Association in Savannah, Washington, recently. Howard remarked his warning did little more than make him "the most unpopular man at the convention."

This is despite the momentary already mentioned for the influence of federal money over the operation of every city in the nation.

The United States was established on principles of freedom. This was never intended as some sort of "sales talk" for the new government which the founding fathers wanted to establish instead of English rule. It was intended to be a hard fact, not only for individual citizens but for the communities and states as well.

We are now faced with the prospect of turning all responsibilities and expenditures of money over to the top level of government. And along with this tendency the Washington bureaus have grown to such sizes that they think the job of government could be better managed from a single, central source. But all money handled by the federal government and distributed to education, the aged, the unemployed, public works projects, to farmers, businesses, to Laos, Cuba or the Congo comes from money personally earned by us.

This trend can only lead to a situation where we will pay everything we earn to the federal government and it will return to us what it thinks is enough for us to live on.

This is a far cry from individual self-betterment which has brought the United States the highest living standards of any civilization yet known. It might be added that our self-betterment motives are controlled mostly by the principles of the world's great religions, all of which are practiced freely in this country.

But religious freedoms as all others are threatened by the trend to bigger and more powerful federal government. And this fact of government grows most rapidly when states, communities and cities build more and more budgets around what is incorrectly known as "federal aid."

Conservative In Brazil

After the return of communist politician Jose Goulart to Brazil, the president, the president seems to be in a somewhat improved position over what it was before the resignation of President Janio Quadros, as far as that country's relations with the United States are concerned.

Goulart was reported to have chosen conservative politician Tancredus Neves to be Brazil's first prime minister under the parliamentary system adopted under military pressure. Although he was justice minister in the regime of the late dictator Getulio Vargas and is one of the most powerful politicians in Brazil, Neves' conservative views should make him more acceptable to the United States than was Goulart or Quadros, the latter of whom had shown far too much friendliness for communist countries and was making trade pacts with them when a threatened civil war forced his resignation.

Because of a military-imposed amendment to the constitution, which demoted the presidency to that of a figurehead, Neves would wield the nation's executive powers.

Under the system before President Quadros resigned, August 27, the president had exercised major powers.

Under the new system, Goulart, as president, will be limited largely to picking the prime minister, with the approval of congress.

This was a price Goulart had to pay to gain the approval of the military so that he could be sworn in as president. He had served as vice-president under Quadros.

With a conservative at the head of the government and with congress still wielding a strong hand, Brazil may not only end the crisis which has persisted in that country for some time but may steer away from communist affiliations to a greater degree than did Quadros or than would have Goulart if he had gone in with full powers.

The United States thus has some reason to be pleased with the turn of affairs in Brazil, although an outright victory of the conservatives would have been far better.

New Farm Fight

Despite congress' rejection of the administration's plan for a massive take-over of American agriculture, renewed efforts to tighten the government controls can be expected.

Planners in the department of agriculture, while temporarily rebuffed, can be expected to launch fresh efforts to regiment the American farmer in the months ahead.

As originally proposed, the Freeman omnibus bill would have allowed the secretary of agriculture to bypass congress in initiating farm programs. Congress would merely have had veto power over proposals drawn up by the secretary and hand-picked farm advisory committees. In effect, the secretary would have had full power over farming, inasmuch as he could select the committee members and would take only those favoring his program. Although a portion of the bill was retained, this dangerous provision was eliminated.

Indications are that the department of agriculture planners are already devising pressures for Capitol Hill next year. Aware that congressmen, responsive to the will of their constituents, don't want any such measure enacted, government officials are trying to figure out ways to force or entice members of congress to vote for something they know is harmful to the best interests of the country and which a majority of those concerned do not want.

The drawn-out battle over Secretary Freeman's omnibus proposal was one of the most heated debates of the decade. Not since the Brannan plan for American farmers, submitted during the Truman administration, were the lines so clearly defined between free enterprise and collectivism.

Thinks U.S. To Shun A-War

Premier Khrushchev And Advisers Are Expected To Push This Country All The Way To The Brink

The dark heart of the problem that confronts President Kennedy on West Berlin is that Premier Khrushchev and his military advisers are convinced that the West is unwilling to go to all-out nuclear war to protect the access rights to that beleaguered city.

This is the ominous warning that Franz Josef Strauss, West German Defense Minister, is flashing at most daily in cables to top defense and diplomatic officials within the Kennedy Administration.

Strauss, who is the Christian Democrat considered most likely to emerge as ultimate successor to Chancellor Adenauer, has suggested one Kennedy cabinet official that the President's most immediate task is still to convince Khrushchev that the West will fight for West Berlin.

That reasoning is also behind Adenauer's vigorous support for early East-West negotiations over the West Berlin crisis.

Strauss contends that if Kennedy doesn't succeed in this vital mission, the Soviet leader will push the West to the edge of nuclear war, from which there can be no backing down without surrender to the Kremlin of vital rights in West Berlin and tremendous damage to U. S. prestige.

"There is reason to believe," warns Strauss, "that in the new look in U. S. defense strategy Khrushchev sees a retreat from the policy of all-out atomic retaliation. He believes that the U. S. has locked its atomic bombs away in a strong box and will not use them in the Berlin crisis."

Strauss points out that West German intelligence, considered equal to any in the world, estimates that Khrushchev is ready to gamble with the use of military force, if necessary, to try to force the West to accept his demands that the East German puppet regime be recognized.

THE SHOWDOWN -- This showdown is expected to come immediately after Khrushchev signs a Peace Treaty with the East German Communist regime, probably sometime in October. At this time, the Soviets are expected to turn control of the access routes from West Germany to West Berlin over to the East German military.

If the West refuses to recognize the East German control, the Soviet-backed Communist regime is expected to try to block these routes by blowing up bridges or using other blockade methods, thus creating a situation where the West will have only the alternative of using military force or backing down.

It is the estimate of West German intelligence that Khrushchev believes he can avoid an all-out nuclear war by controlling and limiting a conflict over the access routes to the immediate area in East Germany. The Soviet leader believes that he will not only win that conflict but will force the West to make major concessions on West Berlin.

Strauss, in his messages, set forth four conditions which he contends have shaped Khrushchev's conclusion that the West will not use all-out nuclear war to protect their rights in Berlin. They are:

1. A five-year history of Western refusal to respond convincingly to repeated Communist provocations.
2. Failure of NATO member states to fulfill their "minimum forces requirements."
3. Strong Western pacifist movements directed against atomic arms, particularly in Britain and the Bonn Republic.
4. President Kennedy's failure to use U. S. military force in the ill-fated Cuban invasion by anti-Castro Cubans.

A prime example of Western faltering, Strauss argues, was its refusal in 1956, the year of the Hungarian revolution, to impress upon Khrushchev that his "policy of slavery" in Eastern Europe must come to an end.

The nations of the West made a fatal error when they failed to make use of their economic, military, and technical supremacy before atomic balance had been reached and before the Hungarian tragedy had moved across the world stage, Strauss contends.

The recommendation of the West German Defense Minister is: A flat warning to Khrushchev from Kennedy that the U. S. will wage all-out nuclear war if the access routes to West Berlin are blocked.

BEHIND THE SCENES -- U. S. Naval units in the Pacific are operating under secret orders to recover any warhead or missile capsule that the Soviets fire into the Pacific. Soviet missile-tracking ships are now on station in the Pacific for new Soviet tests that are already overdue. Marshal Georgi Zhukov, the Soviet's number one World War II hero, is expected to be given a high military post soon by Khrushchev. Zhukov, who has been kept in obscure posts since 1957, has been working out a nuclear weapons turning-over to Communist China, according to high Defense Department sources. East German sources have now defined Khrushchev's objective for West Berlin — make it a "neutral" city. In Communist language, this means that West Berlin could have no ties to West Germany or the West. East Germany would control access and the city's press could not criticize the Communists. Only a small token force of U. N. troops would be permitted to remain in the city. All U. S., British and French troops would be forced to leave.

Who Favors War?

Those Who Advocate Strong Policy
Don't Call For Shooting

All over the country there are those who are demanding a strong foreign policy. But do they want to go to war? A strong foreign policy could mean war. There is no certainty about it either way, but it is fact that we had a weak policy concerning Cuba and we did not go to war; we are showing our claws with regard to Berlin and the Russians respond by renewing bomb testing.

Personally, as a citizen, I favor a strong, vigorous foreign policy. All my experience, now over a period of 44 years, convinces me that there is no way to stop the building of the Soviet Empire except by war or well supported and financed revolution. But it would appear that a large number of persons disagree with such views concerning a shooting war. They want peace. Some want peace at any price. Some would rather be Red than dead. There is no telling about tastes.

Therefore it is necessary to have a decision and a policy that is not casual and opportunistic. In Savannah, Georgia, 1960 persons signed a petition to President Kennedy, demanding a strong foreign policy. But the petition says nothing about favoring a shooting war. It says:

"We, the undersigned people of Savannah are aroused and gravely concerned over the turn of events in Berlin. Americans have repeatedly requested a strong foreign policy. The time has long overdue for the United States to take a firm stand and definite action against Communist aggression. We strongly urge whatever positive and aggressive action is necessary to reverse the present rapid turn toward national disaster."

But when that has been said, it does not encourage the President to go to war with Soviet Russia. After all, Khrushchev enjoys an enormous advantage over us. He can make quick decisions. His allies are contiguous and are not free to choose their own course. Propinquity strengthens his position in all directions. He is not overly concerned with public opinion in his own country or in the rest of the world. No American president can adopt an attitude as independent as that. Franklin

D. Roosevelt maneuvered American public opinion skillfully, but it took him two years to get the United States into World War II. There is not two years or 18 months to spare in the next war. In fact, it is doubtful if that many minutes will be available. The President will have to act on a radar signal without asking anyone's consent.

Of course, we ought to have a strong foreign policy but when it comes to a shooting war, the indications are that it will take some convincing to establish that there is no other way. Some, like myself, believe that there is no other way, but I am convinced that we are in the minority. And it appears from the record that President Kennedy and Secretary of State Rusk believe that American public opinion is not yet ready for another war. Everybody is against Soviet Russia but few want to do anything about it.

One reason may be that we actually lost World War II. We did not lose it to the enemy, Nazi Germany, but we did lose it to our ally, Soviet Russia. First Stalin and then Khrushchev took every advantage of the war involvement, to seize countries and peoples until now Soviet Russia dominates more of the Earth's surface than Germany and Japan did during World War II. Many ask, what is the use of another war? It will probably all be to the advantage of Red China.

The issue is not a strong or a weak foreign policy. The issue is whether the American people are ready and willing to get into a nuclear war. If we are not ready and willing, we shall either stand to be 1) isolated or 2) conquered or 3) reduced to an ignominious status. But the decision must be decisive at this climactic stage. Neither dodging the issue nor belittling it will save us. Nor can we delay either our decisions or our actions very much longer because the enemy is not delaying. His attitude toward bomb testing is a teaser to discover whether we mean business. If we let this threat pass, Khrushchev will go ahead as Stalin did, on the assumption that we are good at speeches but not at action.

Columnist Plans To Court Statesmen While Taking Vacation

Perpetual motion, although considered a scientific impossibility, actually exists in a writer's mind. It goes on and on. This is an au revoir — but — not — goodbye column, as I am flying to old haunts at Cambridge University, England, for two weeks of vacation. It will be the kind of vacation in which all scribblers indulge — reading, masterpieces by moonlight.

Meanwhile I am courting statesmanship by — association. Five Senators, five Representatives and the two National Chairmen of the major parties will be my guest columnists. Let me introduce them in alphabetical order: Senator Everett Dirksen, the Minority Leader, who sublimates great legislative skill and knowledge under the cap-and-bells of genial foolery. But don't let him fool you — this is as knowledgeable and able a man as walks the marble corridors of Capitol Hill.

Senator Hubert Humphrey who won this column's Senator of the Year Award of 1961. He is the Majority Assistant Floor Leader (Whip) and walks — talkie authority on Foreign Relations, Nuclear Testing and Disarmament, to mention only a few subjects where he excels. He will explain how a conservative and liberal can lie down together.

Senator Henry Jackson who was chairman of the Senate Committee of the Year in 1960. In House and Senate, he has lived with the delicate yet stupendous subject of Atomic Energy as long or longer. I think, than any living legislator. For several years Jackson has been majoring in another fissionable material — the complication of Government.

Senator Stuart Symington who saw in the late 1940's, long before anybody else (unless it was his friend James Forrestal) that the Russians had an Air-Space program which was going to move at incredible pace and challenge America's supremacy which we have always taken for granted. Ten or twelve years ago, Symington was writing me letters about his prophetic premonitions. A wiseman more than I would have believed him sooner than I did. But I took a vow never again to take lightly anything Symington seriously said.

Senator John Tower, Texas' first elected Republican member of the upper chamber, is a man of admirable poise, wit, conviction and charm. In covering the special election in Texas last spring, I inclined to favor his Democratic opponent, William Blakely, whom I regarded as better qualified by age and experience for the seat ahead. Lyndon Johnson, but Tower's few weeks in Washington have convinced me I was mistaken and that he will become a memorable figure of the Senate — than which I have no higher praise.

These Senatorial guest columnists, as you are all nationally known personalities, picked with that in mind. The five Representatives are not well-known, but are picked for personal, partisanship and regional reasons.

Rep. Dale Alford of Little Rock (Ark.) is an extraordinarily attractive fellow who will speak for the Confederate spirit of the South.

Rep. Dan Brewster of Baltimore County (Md.) is an old and valued friend who "knew me when" and will "tell all," he says.

Rep. Robert Corbett (Pittsburgh), Rep. Bill Cramer (St. Petersburg, Fla.) and Rep. Bob Wilson (Chula Vista, Calif.) are chosen to speak for three phases of the Republican resurgence in the House where the GOP has gained 20 seats in 1960 while Mr. Kennedy was winning the White House. All will discuss their party's plan — Corbett about urban voting, Cramer about Southern voting, Wilson about the overall.

Finally, Democratic National Chairman John Bailey and Republican National Chairman Bill Miller will write columns about their party's national picture.

Here they are — six Democrats, six Republicans. I'm sure all readers will enjoy them. I hope some readers will write these gentlemen in both approval and disapproval.

'Federal Aid' Hoax

The term "federal aid" is a misnomer. It looks good at first glance only because people and institutions do not consider their complete addresses.

Federal aid may seem to be a "grant" — almost a gift — to a new building or highway under construction near a certain city if the persons viewing the work think of themselves as citizens of that immediate area.

But such a person's full address would read: "Joe Blow, city of Monroe, parish of Ouachita, state of Louisiana, U. S. A." And each level of government exacts taxation from citizen "Joe." Any sort of federal aid used to assist a budget at another level comes from taxes paid by the same taxpayers.

For this reason, the term "federal aid" should be deleted from the vocabulary of sound thing and the words "taxpayers' aid" substituted. There is no such thing as "federal aid" since the federal government has no money of its own. Whatever money it gives away or spends it must take away from the peoples' earnings in taxes.

Not only individual citizens but those persons in charge of budgets at lower governmental levels have become obsessed with the idea of what appears to be "aid" from the federal government. Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard of Monroe pointed out the danger of cities seeking too much federal money while attending a meeting of the American Municipal Association in Seattle, Washington, recently. Howard remarked his warning did little more than make him "the most unpopular man at the convention."

This indicates the momentum already achieved by the influence of federal money over the operation of every city in the nation.

The United States was established on principles of freedom. This was never intended as some sort of "sales talk" for the new government which the founding fathers wanted to establish instead of English rule. It was intended to be a hard fact, not only for individual citizens but for the communities and states as well.

We are now faced with the prospect of turning all responsibilities and expenditures of money over to the top level of government. And along with this tendency the Washington bureaus have grown to such sizes that they think the job of government could be better managed from a single, central source. But all money handled by the federal government and distributed to education, the aged, the unemployed, public works projects, to farmers, businesses, to Laos, Cuba or the Congo comes from money personally earned by us.

This trend can only lead to a situation where we will pay everything we earn to the federal government and it will return to us what it thinks is enough for us to live on.

This is a far cry from individual self-betterment which has brought the United States the highest living standards of any civilization yet known. It might be added that our self-betterment motives are controlled mostly by the principles of the world's great religions, all of which are practiced freely in this country.

But religious freedoms as all others are threatened by the trend to bigger and more powerful federal government. And this fact of government grows most rapidly when states, communities and cities build more and more budgets around what is incorrectly known as "federal aid."

Conservative In Brazil

Although the return of communist-sympathizer Joao Goulart to Brazil to assume the presidency seems regrettable, the situation there may be actually somewhat improved over what it was before the resignation of President Janio Quadros, as far as that country's relations with the United States are concerned.

Goulart was reported to have chosen conservative politician Tancredio Neves to be Brazil's first prime minister under the parliamentary system adopted under military pressure. Although he was justice minister in the regime of the late dictator Getulio Vargas and is one of the most powerful politicians in Brazil, Neves' conservative views should make him more acceptable to the United States than was Goulart or Quadros, the later of whom had shown far too much friendliness for communist countries and was making trade pacts with them when a threatened civil war forced his resignation.

Because of a military-imposed amendment to the constitution, which demoted the presidency largely to that of a figurehead. Neves will wield the nation's executive powers.

Under the system before President Quadros resigned, August 27, the president had exercised major powers.

Under the new system, Goulart, as president, will be limited largely to picking the prime minister, with the approval of congress.

This was a price Goulart had to pay to gain the approval of the military so that he could be sworn in as president. He had served as vice-president under Quadros.

With a conservative at the head of the government and with congress still wielding a strong hand, Brazil may not only end the crisis which has persisted in that country for some time but may steer away from communist affiliations to a greater degree than did Quadros or than would have Goulart if he had gone in with full powers.

The United States thus has some reason to be pleased with the turn of affairs in Brazil, although an outright victory of the conservatives would have been far better.

New Farm Fight

Despite congress' rejection of the administration's plan for a massive take-over of American agriculture, renewed efforts to tighten the government controls can be expected.

Planners in the department of agriculture, while temporarily rebuffed, can be expected to launch fresh efforts to regiment the American farmer in the months ahead.

As originally proposed, the Freeman omnibus bill would have allowed the secretary of agriculture to bypass congress in initiating farm programs. Congress would merely have had veto power over proposals drawn up by the secretary and hand-picked farm advisory committees. In effect, the secretary would have had full power over farming, inasmuch as he could select the committee members and would take only those favoring his program. Although a portion of the bill was retained, this dangerous provision was eliminated.

Indications are that the department of agriculture planners are already devising pressures for Capitol Hill next year. Aware that congressmen, responsive to the will of their constituents, don't want any such measure enacted, government officials are trying to figure out ways to force or entice members of congress to vote for something they know is harmful to the best interests of the country and which a majority of those concerned do not want.

The drawn-out battle over Secretary Freeman's omnibus proposal was one of the most heated debates of the decade. Not since the Brannan plan for American farmers, submitted during the Truman administration, were the lines so clearly defined between free enterprise and collectivism.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Caroline Kennedy's White House school will consist of "a personal play group" rather than taking on the formality of a little red school house.

The White House issued this description Friday following another request for information on the group of youngsters who will meet daily with Caroline and two teachers.

Asked again whether the school group would be segregated or integrated, Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said, "this is Caroline's personal play group made up of her personal friends, and I'm not going to ask their race, creed, or color."

The pre-school age group met at the White House in the spring with one teacher in charge. A second teacher has been added for the fall session.

Liberal Unseats Tammany Chief

NEW YORK (AP)—A new force has emerged on the New York political scene—James S. Lanigan, young insurgent conqueror of Tammany chief Carmine G. De Sapio in a David and Goliath election battle.

Lanigan unseated De Sapio as Democratic district leader in Greenwich Village in balloting Thursday.

That has earned him serious consideration as a possibility to succeed De Sapio also as head of Tammany Hall, the Manhattan Democratic organization.

De Sapio's Tammany leadership depended on his also being a district leader.

Compared with De Sapio—for years a giant in city, state and national political maneuvering—Lanigan was a stripling, comparatively unknown publicly outside his home ballroom.

But Lanigan went to Harvard at the same time as President Kennedy and belonged to the same luncheon club as the President's older brother, Joseph, who was killed in World War II.

Lanigan spent his honeymoon in the White House as the guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who, with former Sen. Herbert H. Lehman, was a spearhead in the insurgent drive against the city organization.

He served as assistant campaign manager for Adlai E. Stevenson in the latter's unsuccessful presidential campaign in 1952 and 1956.

Stevenson, now ambassador to the United Nations, was one of the first to visit Lanigan and congratulate him after his triumph.

"Where were all these people in 1952 and 1956?" Stevenson quipped.

Lanigan, 43, a lawyer, combines a spry aggressiveness with a sense of humor. Balding, conservatively dressed and wearing hornrimmed glasses, he looks the part of an egghead and has no objection to the term.

But he regards himself as a political pro, too.

He campaigned on the theme that party members should have more of a voice—that political direction should derive upward from the people rather than down from "the bosses." He favors district party meetings in town meeting style.

He has been an ardent exponent of the liberal wing of the Democratic party.

Lanigan, born in Greeley, Neb., got his first taste of political campaigning in 1934 when his father ran for Congress on the New Deal ticket in that predominantly Republican state. His father lost but went to Washington nonetheless as an assistant to the then Atty. Gen. Homer Cummings.

The son spent every moment he could find during high school years in visits to the Senate gallery, watching his idol, Progressive Republican Sen. George Norris.

"I practically lived in Congress," Lanigan says.

Soviets Permit U. S. Envoy To Visit Makinen

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department said the Soviet Union has finally given a U.S. representative permission to see Marvin William Makinen, the American student whom the Reds have sentenced to eight years for spying.

The department said Friday the head of the consular section at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, Joseph B. Norbury Jr., has gone to Kiev to see Makinen.

State Department press officer Joseph W. Reap said no word had reached Washington on the outcome.

The Soviets claimed the 22-year-old Makinen of Ashburnham, Mass., who had been attending a West Berlin university, was assigned by U.S. intelligence agents to spy on a motor trip through Iron Curtain countries. Word of Makinen's July 27 arrest was not given to the U.S. Embassy until Sept. 4.

The State Department denied Makinen was a U.S. spy and protested the Soviet failure to notify the U.S. government for more than a month after his arrest.

NATO Leader Ready To Fight If Necessary

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Gen. Lauris Norstad, NATO commander-in-chief, was quoted Friday as saying of Red war threats over Berlin: "If anything happens, I have the means to fight and I'll damned well fight."

NATO Secretary General Dirk Stikker, who came here for strategy talks with State and Defense Department officials, said Norstad expressed this view to him recently.

Stikker told newsmen that war over Berlin would be "absolutely foolish" but that if the Communists start hostilities, "NATO will fight."

The Netherlands official emphasized "there is a firm obligation" for the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance to defend West Berlin.

U.S. Issues Forecast On Cotton Crop

WASHINGTON (AP)—Generally favorable weather in August boosted the official forecast of this year's cotton crop by 344,000 bales to put prospective production at 14,292,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight.

A crop of this size would fall slightly below predictions of domestic and export demands for 14,500,000 bales. But any deficit in production could be filled from reserve and surplus supplies of 7,200,000 bales accumulated from past crops.

The Mississippi crop was placed at 1,590,000 bales with the yield per acre at 477 pounds. The Louisiana estimate was 523,000 bales with a yield per acre of 458 pounds.

The crop estimate—made by the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board—compares with 14,372,000 produced last year and 13,553,000 for the 10-year (1950-59) average.

The crop is being grown under federal acreage planting allotments and marketing quotas designed to prevent excessive production.

The indicated yield per harvested acre was forecast at 437 pounds compared with 436 indicated a month ago, with 446 last year and the 10-year average of 362 pounds.

In an accompanying report, the Census Bureau said 685,932 running bales of cotton from this year's crop had been ginned prior to Sept. 1 compared with 918,989 to the like date last year.

The crop board said that if the ratio of lint to cottonseed is the same as the average for the past five years, production of cottonseed would be 5,911,000 tons compared to 5,866,000 last year.

The yield per acre and production, respectively, for other states included:

Alabama 363 pounds per acre and production 680,000 bales; Arkansas 475 and 1,340,000; and Texas 337 and 4,600,000.

The ginnings Sept. 1 this year and last, respectively, included:

Alabama 6,669 running bales this year and 57,407 last year; Arkansas no figures yet for this year and 580; Louisiana 3,053 and 9,267; Mississippi 863 and 17,763; and Texas 652,229 and 605,143.

THIS WAS THE CIVIL WAR

By MERTON T. AKERS
United Press International

President Jefferson Davis of the Confederacy, facing an election Nov. 6, began having serious cabinet troubles in the early fall of 1861.

The cabinet had been put together hastily in February 1861 at the birth of the Confederacy at Montgomery, Ala., by choosing one man from each of six original seceding states. Made up as it was of men picked on the basis of political expediency rather than individual talent, it began to break open at the seams in a few months.

The first crack had come in July. Robert Toombs, the epigrammatic Georgian who was the first secretary of state, quit and went into the Confederate army as a brigadier general. Toombs, a U.S. senator before the Civil War, had not been a diplomat. Rather, he was a fiscal expert, centering his interest in the Senate on tariff and financial affairs.

Toombs' place was taken by R. M. T. Hunter of Virginia, a former congressman, speaker of the house and senator in Washington. Like Toombs, he had no talent for diplomacy. But he was appointed by Davis partly to give Virginia a prominent place in the cabinet. The state had not seceded when the original cabinet had been formed and had no representatives in the administration.

Like Toombs, Hunter was a disaffected Confederate presidential candidate. When the Confederacy was in the talking state late in 1860 among Southern leaders in Washington, Hunter was spoken of as the ideal man for president. Toombs also felt he had been passed over at Montgomery when Davis was elected the provisional president.

Now that Davis was coming up for election to a full six-year term, it seemed a good move to mend his political fences with Hunter. Hunter, 52, belonged to the old Virginia aristocracy. He was a convinced secessionist, wealthy and respected. He considered himself as secretary of state in fact, not just a clerk of Mr. Davis, as he told his friends.

As Davis was his own secretary of war, so was he his own secretary of state, a situation which inevitably led to a clash. It came in March 1862 during a cabinet meeting when Hunter offered an opinion on the military situation. Mr. Hunter, Davis said, "you are secretary of state, and when information is wished of that department it will be time for you to speak."

The next day Hunter resigned.

He then went into the Confederate Senate and joined the increasing ranks of Davis' enemies. Another cabinet crisis blew up as an aftermath of the battle of Manassas (Bull Run). Southern public opinion at first accepted the victory as decisive and expected the Confederate army to exploit its successes by going on and capturing Washington.

But August came and went and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston and P. G. T. Beauregard, heading the Army of Northern Virginia, made no moves in the direction of Washington except to throw out a few pickets on the Virginia hills overlooking the capital.

This seeming inaction, due to lack of men, arms and food rather than to incompetent leadership or want of courage, sent Confederate public opinion sliding back down.

NEED SCAPEGOAT

The situation called for a scapegoat and the blame naturally fell on the war department. The head of the war department was Leroy Pope Walker, an Alabamian who was a political power in his state and had been appointed to the cabinet mostly for that reason. Walker understood at the time of his appointment that Davis would run the department because Davis had been secretary of war under President Pierce and was experienced in that kind of administration.

Probably no man, except a magician, could have produced the recruits and war materials necessary to mount an offensive against the North, but that fact did not enter the picture at the moment.

Walker was a dedicated secessionist but dwelled more on ceremony than on the immediate business of equipping an army. One eccentricity of Walker's is revealing. He would not sign a letter unless it was three or four pages long, however trivial the subject.

Mary Boykin Chesnut, his diarist who circulated in Richmond officialdom, called him "a slow coach," and when some one expressed a desire for a "Napoleon" to lead the armies, she commented: "If Heaven sent one, Walker would not give him a commission."

Walker resigned on Sept. 16, 1861. Davis gave him a commission as a brigadier general and Walker disappeared in the red tape of army administration in the West.

The next day Judah P. Benjamin, 50, the Attorney general, was appointed secretary of war. The official who was expected to provide war material from almost non-existent sources.

John B. Jones, the diary-keeping war department clerk, wrote the day after the appointment: "Mr. Benjamin's hitherto perennial smile faded almost away as he realized the fact that he was now the most important member of the cabinet. He well knew how arduous the duties were but then he was robust in health, and capable of any amount of labor."

Benjamin's career both before and after the Civil War bordered on the fabulous.

He was born in 1811 at St. Croix in the West Indies. Early in life he was taken by his English-Jewish parents to Charleston, S.C. At 14 he entered Yale and remained two years. In his third year he quit the university, for reasons he never explained.

A classmate wrote that he was expelled by his fellow students for stealing watches and money. Benjamin, by that time a U.S. senator from Louisiana, never denied or confirmed the charges. All through his career he seemed impervious to public criticism.

Whatever the cause of his leaving Yale, he went to New Orleans instead of back to Charleston. In New Orleans, he studied law and was picked up a living teaching English to Creoles. In the process he became proficient in French. He married one of his students, Natalie St. Martin. After about 10 years of marriage, Mrs. Benjamin took their only child and went to Paris to live. Why she left is another of many mysteries in Benjamin's life. He kept her and the child living in luxury all through the war and afterward.

He was admitted to the bar in Louisiana and eventually the law led him into politics. By Civil War time he was a senator from Louisiana and high in Confederate councils.

He remained in the cabinet until the Confederacy fell. Then he fled to England and carved out another career as a lawyer. In Richmond he was known as "the brains of the Confederacy."

Mrs. Chesnut wrote: "Everything Mr. Benjamin said we listened to, bore in mind and gave heed to it diligently."

Mrs. Burton Harrison (Constance Cary, one of the belles of Richmond) called him "silver-tongued" and said nothing could surpass "his charming stories, his dramatic recitations of scraps of verse and clever comments on men, women and books."

THIS WAS THE CIVIL WAR

By MERTON T. AKERS
United Press International

President Jefferson Davis of the Confederacy, facing an election Nov. 6, began having serious cabinet troubles in the early fall of 1861.

The cabinet had been put together hastily in February 1861 at the birth of the Confederacy at Montgomery, Ala., by choosing one man from each of six original seceding states. Made up as it was of men picked on the basis of political expediency rather than individual talent, it began to break open at the seams in a few months.

The first crack had come in July.

Robert Toombs, the epigrammatic Georgian who was the first secretary of state, quit and went into the Confederate army as a brigadier general. Toombs, a U.S. senator before the Civil War, had no bent as a diplomat. Rather, he was a fiscal expert, centering his interest in the Senate on tariff and financial affairs.

Toombs' place was taken by R. M. T. Hunter of Virginia, a former congressman, speaker of the house and senator in Washington. Like Toombs, he had no talent for diplomacy. But he was appointed by Davis partly to give Virginia a prominent place in the cabinet. The state had not seceded when the original cabinet had been formed and had no representatives in the administration.

DISAPPOINTED

Like Toombs, Hunter was a disappointed Confederate presidential candidate. When the Confederacy was in the talking state late in 1860 among Southern leaders in Washington, Hunter was spoken of as the ideal man for president. Toombs also felt he had been passed over at Montgomery when Davis was elected the provisional president.

Now that Davis was coming up for election to a full six-year term, it seemed a good move to mend his political fences with Hunter.

Hunter, 52, belonged to the "old Virginia aristocracy." He was a convinced secessionist, wealthy and respected.

He considered himself as secretary of state in fact, not just "a clerk of Mr. Davis," as he told his friends.

As Davis was his own secretary of war, so was he his own secretary of state, a situation which inevitably led to a clash. It came in March 1862 during a cabinet meeting when Hunter offered an opinion on the military situation.

"Mr. Hunter," Davis said, "you are secretary of state, and when information is wished of that department it will be time for you to speak."

The next day Hunter resigned.

He then went into the Confederate Senate and joined the increasing ranks of Davis' enemies.

Another cabinet crisis blew up as an aftermath of the battle of Manassas (Bull Run).

Southern public opinion at first accepted the victory as decisive and expected the Confederate army to exploit its successes by going on and capturing Washington.

But August came and went and Gens. Joseph E. Johnston and P. G. T. Beauregard, heading the Army of Northern Virginia, made no moves in the direction of Washington except to throw out a few pickets on the Virginia hills overlooking the capital.

This seeming inaction due to lack of men, arms and food rather than to incompetent leadership or want of courage, sent Confederate public opinion sliding back down.

NEED SCAPEGOAT

The situation called for a scapegoat and the blame naturally fell on the war department.

The head of the war department was Leroy Pope Walker, an Alabamian who was a political appointee to the cabinet mostly for that reason. Walker understood at the time of his appointment that Davis would run the department because Davis had been secretary of war under President Pierce and was experienced in that kind of administration.

Probably no man, except a magician, could have produced the recruits and war materials necessary to mount an offensive against the North, but that fact did not enter the picture at the moment.

Walker was a dedicated secessionist but dwelled more on ceremony than on the immediate business of equipping an army. One eccentricity of Walker's is revealing. He would not sign a letter unless it was three or four pages long, however trivial the subject.

Mary Boykin Chesnut, his diarist who circulated in Richmond officialdom, called him "a slow coach," and when some expressed a desire for a "Napoleon" to lead the armies, she commented: "If Heaven sent one, Walker would not give him a commission."

Walker resigned on Sept. 16, 1861. Davis gave him a commission as a brigadier general and Walker disappeared in the red tape of army administration in the West.

The next day Judah P. Benjamin, 50, the Attorney general, was appointed secretary of war. The official who was expected to provide war material from almost non-existent sources.

John B. Jones, the diary-keeping war department clerk, wrote the day after the appointment:

SMILE FADED

"Mr. Benjamin's hitherto perennial smile faded almost away as he realized the fact that he was now the most important member of the cabinet. He well knew how arduous the duties were but then he was robust in health, and capable of any amount of labor."

Benjamin's career both before and after the Civil War bordered on the fabulous.

He was born in 1811 at St. Croix in the West Indies. Early in life he was taken by his English-Jewish parents to Charleston, S.C. At 14 he entered Yale and remained two years. In his third year he quit the university, for reasons he never explained. A classmate wrote that he was expelled by his fellow students for stealing watches and money. Benjamin, by that time a U.S. senator from Louisiana, never denied or confirmed the charges. All through his career he seemed impervious to public criticism.

Whatever the cause of his leaving Yale, he went to New Orleans instead of back to Charleston. In New Orleans, he studied law and picked up a living teaching English to Creoles. In the process he became proficient in French. He married one of his students, Natalie St. Martin. After about 10 years of marriage, Mrs. Benjamin took their only child and went to Paris to live. Why she left is another of many mysteries in Benjamin's life. He kept her and the child living in luxury all through the war and afterward.

He was admitted to the bar in Louisiana and eventually the law led him into politics. By Civil War time he was a senator from Louisiana and high in Confederate councils.

He remained in the cabinet until the Confederacy fell. Then he fled to England and carved out another career as a lawyer.

In Richmond he was known as "the brains of the Confederacy."

Mrs. Chesnut wrote: "Everything Mr. Benjamin said we listened to, bore in mind and gave heed to it diligently."

Mrs. Burton Harrison (Constance Cary, one of the belles of Richmond) called him "silver-tongued" and said nothing could surpass "his charming stories, his dramatic recitations of scraps of verse and clever comments on men, women and books."

Of widespread interest throughout the area is the wedding this evening in Jesus the Good Shepherd Catholic Church of Miss Sallie Oliver, daughter of Mrs. Travis Oliver, and Pierre Lauve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lauve of Alexandria. A wedding breakfast this morning concludes a gala round of festive parties honoring the engaged couple.

Study Habits

Best Aid To

Good Grades

In the Fall a young gal's fancy turns — not to thoughts of her football hero — but to scheduling a serious semester of concentrated study. For today's teen-ager think much more about preparation for college and career than about this week's juke box favorites.

Good study habits, once mastered a: the junior high school and high school level, can set the pattern for the more difficult subjects ahead. The educational research staff of Remington Portable Typewriters, Division of Sperry Rand Corporation, suggest a series of procedures which promise maximum results for effort spent.

Space your labor: The first half-hour of a study period is the most productive, so don't do too much in one sitting. The rate of retention slows considerably without a rest and the U. S. Army system (followed in all Army schools) of a ten-minute break at fifty-minute intervals helps to maintain concentration. If a tough assignment becomes fatiguing, try raiding the refrigerator. With a fresh approach, you'll finish in half the time.

Start with a giant step: Tackle the most difficult task first. If you love English and hate Algebra grit your teeth and solve the equations; then breeze through your favorite Shakespeare soliloquy.

Find the best place to work: Set up a good study corner and do all your work there. Keep your desk well lighted, clutter-free and don't use it as a snack bar. If you share a room, find a way to partition off a study area and avoid the temptation of an all-night gab-fest.

Put leisure time to work: Review the French vocabulary you memorized last night on the bus to school. Go over the steps of a geometry theorem while you're walking the dog. Practice tomorrow's speech in front of the mirror as you brush one hundred strokes. Take the drudgery out of homework and watch your grades soar when midterms roll around.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If a child progresses normally, remain at this figure throughout life. Today, there is a more optimistic estimate. The child's IQ can be improved. In a little paperback book called, "How to Raise your Child's I.Q." by David Engler, (Ballantine Books) a parent will find ways in which to manage this.

BELIEVE IN HEREDITY There still are individuals who believe that a child's heredity is responsible for his level of intelligence, while research seems to have proved ably that an enriched environment can result in a higher level.

So it is fortunate that we no longer look upon the I.Q. as an infallible index of a child's mental capacity. We realize that in an intellectually richer environment, with more intelligent foster-parents, a child actually can become smarter than he was considered to be.

"Ready for School?" is a 10-cent booklet which answers questions mothers ask concerning their children's first venture to school. To obtain it, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper. The child who was rated 85 or 120 let us say, was supposed to

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I break up, what excuse could I have? I have a disagreement that I hate to hurt his feelings. Needs settling. We know a couple — FEELS NOTHING who have been married about a year. We attended their wedding and gave them a nice gift. I see him now. It is obvious that you this man at work every day. He are not "in love" with this man, keeps saying, "My wife and I so tell him, like a sister, that he are very put out with you and would make a wonderful brother your wife because you haven't paid us a visit in our new apartment yet." When I told my wife this, she says, "If they want us over, his wife should call me and invite us."

I can't tell this to the man, can I? Is it our place to call them in and out to ourselves over? Should we wait until they call us? What is your advice? — PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: It is considered quite proper to phone friends who are newly married and ask them if you may call on them.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going steady with a young man for three months now. He has a good personality, a good job, and my parents like him. You might think I have no problem, but I have. When he kisses me I just don't get that wonderful tingle. No matter how hard I try, I can't seem to feel anything for him. It's like kissing my brother. I know he thinks a lot of me, because he has been talking about marriage. I am 22 and have felt more for other men I've dated than this one, so I know it's not me. Should I keep going with him? If I

YOUR PROBLEMS

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: What can I law for the postman to "give a do about a husband who has had $30 worth of illegal parking tickets to pay in five weeks?"

The worst of it is he hides the tickets in odd places and when I find them they are unpaid and overdue. When I read the riot act he says he's always been this way and he doesn't think he will ever be any different. He brags that he has never had an accident or been nicked for a moving violation.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If a child progresses normally, his I.Q. is of no great consideration to anyone. But, when he is extraordinarily slow to talk; when he becomes incorrigible — his I.Q. has a bearing on these problems.

All I.Q. ratings are based on tests (individual or group) which are generally revisions of the first Binet-Simon intelligence test. After testing hundreds of children of the same age, it becomes possible to determine what the great majority of these children can do. This represents a test for a child of this age level.

When a 2-year-old child can do the 2-year-old test, then he is considered to be of the normal intelligence for this age. His I.Q. then would be 100.

If, he could only do the test designed for the 1-year-old, then he would have an I.Q. below 100. And if he could do the tests designed for the 3-or 4-year-old, he would get a very high I.Q. over 100. The I.Q. is obtained by dividing the age figure whose test the child can do, by the figure representing his real age.

At one time it was believed that the I.Q. was a static figure. The child who was rated 85 or 120, let us say, was supposed to remain at this figure throughout life.

Today, there is a more optimistic estimate. The child's I.Q. can be improved. In a little paperback book called, "How to Raise your Child's I.Q." by David Engler, (Ballantine Books) a parent will find ways in which to manage this.

BELIEVE IN HEREDITY

There still are individuals who believe that a child's heredity is responsible for his level of intelligence, while research seems to have proved ably that an enriched environment can result in a higher level.

So it is fortunate that we no longer look upon the I.Q. as an infallible index of a child's mental capacity. We realize that in an intellectually richer environment, with more intelligent foster-parents, a child actually can become smarter than he was considered to be.

"Ready for School?" is a 10-cent booklet which answers questions mothers ask concerning their children's first venture to school. To obtain it, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I use? I hate to hurt his feelings. —FEELS NOTHING

DEAR FEELS: You will hurt him less if you are honest with him now. It is obvious that you are not "in love" with this man, so tell him, like a sister, that he would make a wonderful brother.

DEAR ABBY: After being begged for a year, we let our 18-year-old daughter get married. She has been married for 8 months, and has never spent one day in her own apartment. She and her hubby have eaten every meal with me, and they spend most of their nights here. I love my daughter, and her husband is a nice enough boy, but I am getting sick of keeping house for them. Should I tell them to move in with me, and give me the price of the apartment? —Mrs. Workhorse.

DEAR MRS.: Instead of keeping house for your daughter, teach her to keep house herself. Then send her home and tell her to stay there and be a good wife to her husband.

Dear Miserable: It's against the law for the postman to "give a letter back." Once a letter is dropped into the box it becomes the responsibility of the postal authorities to effect delivery.

Let this be a lesson to you. It's good to get the anger out on paper, but "mail" the letter in your drawer until you've had time to cool off and re-read it the following day.

Union Continues Wildcat Strikes

DETROIT (AP)—A new wildcat strike erupted Friday as bargain for General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers Union, strove against time to wrap up a new contract in the face of a strike deadline of 10 a.m. Monday.

There was a touchiness on both sides already about a continuing three-day wildcat strike in a key GM supplier plant at Pittsburgh, Pa., when a new walkout developed at Janesville, Wis., idling 3,852.

Still on the bargaining table and threatening to run negotiations right up to the strike deadline were noneconomic, national-level issues and thousands of local, at-plant demands for change in work rules and such. In past negotiations, local strikes have been called to emphasize local-level demands.

GM Vice President Louis G. Scatena, the company's chief negotiator, told newsmen that the Monday strike deadline is academic if those people don't go back to work.

Scatena was referring to wildcat strikers in general and particularly to those at a Fisher Body stamping plant in Pittsburgh who manufacture pressed metal parts for most car assembly lines.

And in a move to get Pittsburgh strikers back to the plant, GM announced it would "go to court to get an injunction against illegal picketing." The local union president was attacked when he attempted to escort through the lines the personnel director of the Fisher Body division.

Unauthorized walkouts erupted at GM plants in the wake of an economic settlement and extension of a 10 a.m. Wednesday strike deadline in next Monday.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther blamed the walkouts primarily on "poor communications and misunderstanding" of the announcement of the deadline extension.

Wildcat strikes continued for the third day at a Fisher Body plant in St. Louis and an adjoining Chevrolet assembly plant. There were 3,800 idled there and 1,400 at Pittsburgh.

Workers at Fisher Body stamping plants at Marion, Ind., and Mansfield, Ohio and a Buick Oldsmobile Pontiac assembly plant in Atlanta, Ga., returned to their jobs Friday after one-day stoppages. In all, 5,550 were involved.

Scatena said there is "a bad situation" at Pittsburgh and an apparent revolt against the international union in St. Louis. Reuther said the union was attempting to get workers back on the job and described as "a most unfortunate incident" the striking of a picket line by the plant manager's car at Pittsburgh.

Representatives of the international union have been dispatched to all trouble spots. Details of the new national economic package were disclosed Thursday and Reuther described it as liberal, adding that it would, after tax adjustments, result in an hourly wage increase of 12.04 cents.

It also increases pensions and under it the company takes over full payment for hospital and medical insurance. Additionally, it provides partial pay for any hours fewer than 40 in a short work week and increases supplemental unemployment benefits.

In return for this package, the union agreed to forego a one-cent hourly cost of living increase that would have become effective this month under existing contracts.

They also agreed to that two cents of an average seven-cent annual improvement factor wage increase could be diverted from paychecks for one year to pay the half of company hospital and medical insurance costs now borne by workers.

Soldiers' Offer To Marry Draw Angry Barrage

LONDON (AP)—Three British soldiers who offered to marry any girl who would buy their discharge from the army came under attack Friday from a mother of one of them, a girl friend of another, and their military commander.

Valde Estoe, mother of Lance Corp. Brian Estoe whose release would cost any prospective bride 250 pounds—$700—pointed out that the three soldiers are only 20 years old and would need parental consent to marry.

And I certainly wouldn't agree to my two marrying a girl just because she was prepared to pay 250 pounds to get him his release," she said.

Mr. Robert Harvey, of the men's regiment, said: "Their greatest punishment is the ribbing from other soldiers at their camp at Catterick, Yorkshire."

A final—and possibly painful—shot came from Margaret Evans, 17, a girl friend of one of the three, would be bridegrooms, John Dundee.

"We've been going out together for three months—planning our engagement. If I won 250 pounds on the lottery's pool tomorrow I wouldn't buy his release after this," she said.

Students May Still Obtain Loan Money

Approximately $10,000 is still available for loans to superior high school students at Northeast Louisiana State College from funds received under the National Defense Education Act.

Twenty-three new students received loans averaging $400 for the 1961-62 session, and another 23 students had loans averaging $400 renewed in August. J. O. Lancaster, supervisor of scholarships and placement, reports.

Under the program at Northeast Louisiana State College, students may borrow a maximum of $5,000 a year in $500 per year to help defray necessary college expenses.

Students are not required to start repaying their loans until after they have been out of college for one year. They have ten years to make repayment, and if they are teaching in secondary or elementary schools, one-half of their loans will be forgiven and they will be required to repay only one-half of what they borrowed. Only three percent interest will be charged on these loans.

Under the NDEA requirements, these funds will be used for loans for superior graduates from secondary schools, or the equivalent, and these students must be seeking college degrees.

Special consideration is to be given to students with superior academic backgrounds and also to students indicating a superior capacity of preparation in science, mathematics, engineering or a modern foreign language.

Students receiving loans must evidence financial need and must be full-time college students. They must be in good standing and making normal and satisfactory academic progress toward degrees.

Persons wishing to apply for loans should contact Lancaster as soon as possible.

New Bizerte Plan Offered By Bourguiba

TUNIS (AP)—Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba agreed Friday to a new basis for settlement with France on the strategic Bizerte naval base.

Bourguiba told a news conference negotiations could be held on French use of the base as long as the Berlin crisis continues.

Then there should be talks on the eventual withdrawal of French troops, he said.

President Charles de Gaulle said Tuesday he desired to work out an arrangement along these lines with Tunisia.

The French have stressed that they were unable to abandon the base at a time when it might be needed in a crisis with the Soviet Union.

In Paris, a Foreign Office spokesman said France had "taken note of the statement with interest." When a text of Bourguiba's remarks is available, he said, it would be studied with attention especially to means which can contribute to a relaxation of the situation.

Bourguiba's statement clearly was aimed at ending the seven-week old Bizerte crisis which followed the Tunisian blockade of the base and a four-day French-Tunisian battle which followed.

The fighting claimed more than 1,000 Tunisian lives, according to Tunis sources. The French now occupy most of Bizerte city as well as the base.

By suggesting an agreement to permit France to keep her troops at Bizerte for the time being, Bourguiba seemed to be demonstrating his willingness to help France and the West at the time of mounting difficulties over Berlin.

Women Plead Guilty In Fraud Case

Three West Monroe women charged with defrauding the Louisiana Welfare Department of more than $10,000 pled guilty Friday in federal court here and were remanded for sentencing at a later date.

Mrs. Virginia E. Baker, 102 Halsell St., Mrs. Gladys Ann Kennedy, 1312 Bennie Brees St., and Mrs. Muriel Moreau, 101 McBride St., were remanded on bond until pre-sentence investigation is made.

The trio entered pleas before Judge Ben C. Dawkins Jr., and waived right of grand jury investigation of the charges.

Mrs. Baker, former case worker and visitor for the Ouachita Parish office of the welfare department, pled guilty to 16 counts: nine counts of having "devised a fraudulent scheme to obtain welfare checks for fictitious clients," and nine counts of using the mails to carry out the scheme since 1958.

Mrs. Kennedy admitted three counts on each charge, while Mrs. Moreau pled guilty to two counts on each charge.

Federal and state money was involved.

Mrs. Baker listed fake persons in the old age category, and had checks sent out to them. Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Moreau received the checks.

Kennedys Plan To Celebrate Anniversary

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President Kennedy returned to Cape Cod late Friday to celebrate his eighth wedding anniversary and relax, ashore and afloat, with his wife and family.

Kennedy's Air Force jet landed at Otis Air Force Base at 6:03 p.m. EDT. He waved to the crowd, much smaller than during the tourist season, with a rolled-up newspaper.

The President boarded a helicopter for the 18-mile hop to his summer place overlooking Nantucket Sound.

Mrs. Kennedy, who has been here all summer, except for one brief trip to Washington, is staying at Hyannis Port for another week.

So the President and First Lady will observe their anniversary this weekend, a little early.

They were married Sept. 12, 1953, at Newport, R.I. The Kennedys are expected in Newport before the end of the month to spend at least one weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, mother and stepfather of Mrs. Kennedy.

This weekend was Kennedy's 11th in a row on the cape. Whenever the weather has permitted, Kennedy has gone aboard the 32-foot cruiser Marlin to relax with his family on the sound.

The President plans to return to Washington Monday morning. Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and baby John Jr. are to return the following week.

Union Continues Wildcat Strikes

DETROIT (AP)—A new wildcat strike erupted Friday as bargain for General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers Union, strove against time to wrap up a new contract in the face of a strike deadline of 10 a.m. Monday.

There was a touchiness on both sides already about a continuing three-day wildcat strike in a key GM supplier plant at Pittsburgh, Pa., when a new walkout developed at Janesville, Wis., idling 3,352.

Still on the bargaining table and threatening to run negotiations right up to the strike deadline were noneconomic, national-level issues and thousands of local, at-plant demands for changes in work rules and such. In past negotiations, local strikes have been called to emphasize local-level demands.

GM Vice resident Louis G. Seaton, the company's chief negotiator, told newsmen that "the Monday strike deadline is academic if those people don't go back to work."

Seaton was referring to wildcat strikers in general and particularly to those at a Fisher Body stamping plant in Pittsburgh who manufacture pressed metal parts for most car assembly lines.

And in a move to get Pittsburgh strikers back to the plant, GM announced it would "go to court to get an injunction against illegal picketing." The local union president was attacked when he attempted to escort through the lines the personnel director of the Fisher Body division.

Unauthorized walkouts erupted at GM plants in the wake of an economic settlement and extension of a 10 a.m. Wednesday strike deadline to next Monday.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther blamed the walkouts primarily on "poor communications and misunderstanding" of the announcement of the deadline extension.

Wildcat strikes continued for the third day at a Fisher Body plant in St. Louis and an adjoining Chevrolet assembly plant. There were 5,800 idled there and 1,450 at Pittsburgh.

Workers at Fisher Body stamping plants at Marion, Ind., and Mansfield, Ohio and a Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac assembly plant in Atlanta, Ga., returned to their jobs Friday after one-day stoppages. In all, 5,550 were involved. Seaton said there is "a bad situation" at Pittsburgh and an apparent revolt against the international union in St. Louis. Reuther said the union was attempting to get workers back on the job and described as "a most unfortunate incident" the striking of a picket by the plant manager's car at Pittsburgh.

Representatives of the international union have been dispatched to all trouble spots.

Details of the new national economic package were disclosed Thursday and Reuther described it as liberal, adding that it would, after tax adjustments, result in an hourly wage increase of 12.04 cents.

It also increases pensions and under it the company takes over full payment for hospital and medical insurance. Additionally, it provides partial pay for any hours fewer than 40 in a short work week and increases supplemental unemployment benefits.

In return for this package, the union agreed to forego a one-cent hourly cost of living increase that would have become effective this month under existing contracts.

They also agreed to that two cents of an average seven-cent annual improvement factor wage increase could be diverted from paychecks for one year to pay the half of company hospital and medical insurance costs now borne by workers.

Soldiers' Offer To Marry Draw Angry Barrage

LONDON (AP)—Three British soldiers who offered to marry any girl who would by their discharge from the army came under attack Friday from a mother of one of them, a girl friend of another, and their military commander.

Violet Estoe, mother of Lance Corp. Brian Estoe whose release would cost any prospective bride 250 pounds—$700—pointed out that all three soldiers are only 20 years old and would need parental consent to marry.

"And I certainly wouldn't agree to my boy marrying a girl just because she was prepared to pay 250 pounds to get him his release," she said.

Maj. Robert Harvey of the men's regiment, said: "Their greatest punishment is the ribbing from other soldiers at their camp at Catterick, Yorkshire."

A final—and possibly parting—shot came from Margaret Evans, 17, a girl friend of one of the three would-be bridegrooms, John Dundee.

"We've been going out together for three months—planning our engagement. If I won 250 pounds on the football pools tomorrow I wouldn't buy his release after this," she said.

Wagner won Democratic nomination for mayor in bid for re-election. Lanigan defeated Carmine G. De Sapio for Greenwich Village district leadership. Students May Still Obtain Loan Money

Approximately $15,000 is still available for loans to superior high school students at Northeast Louisiana State College from funds received under the National Defense Education Act.

Twenty-three new students received loans averaging $400 for the 1961-62 session, and another 23 students had loans averaging $400 renewed in August, J. O. Lancaster, supervisor of scholarships and placement, reports.

Under the program at Northeast, superior high school students may borrow a minimum of $75 and a maximum of $700 per year to help defray necessary college expenses.

PAYMENT PLAN

Students are not required to start repaying their loans until after they have been out of college for one year. They have ten years to make repayment, and if they are teaching in secondary or elementary schools, one-half of their loans will be forgiven and they will be required to repay only one-half of what they borrowed. Only three percent interest will be charged on these loans.

Under the NDEA requirements, these funds will be used for loans for superior graduates from secondary schools, or the equivalent, and these students must be seeking college degrees.

Special consideration is to be given to students with superior academic backgrounds and also to students indicating a superior capacity of preparation in science, mathematics, engineering or a modern foreign language. But students in any field of study may apply, and may be granted loans.

Students receiving loans must evidence financial need and must be full-time college students. They must be in good standing and making normal and satisfactory academic progress toward degrees.

Persons wishing to apply for loans should contact Lancaster as soon as possible.

Use Of Berlin Forces In Show Shocks Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Disgraceful, shocking, highly dangerous" was the description applied by senators Friday to the use of U.S. Army forces in Thursday's filming of a Jack Paar television show in Berlin.

The Defense Department, with approval of the White House, ordered an investigation.

"This incident has disturbed the White House and the State Department and has brought a large number of inquiries from the public," said Arthur Sylvester, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs.

In the Senate, an obviously aroused Democratic majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, said he was more than disturbed.

"To say I was disturbed is an understatement," Mansfield said.

He told the Senate the situation in Berlin is a world tragedy and not a TV spectacular "to be made into some kind of game for the personal profit of personalities in the entertainment world."

Negro Is Fined In West Monroe Court Activity

West Monroe City Judge John McCormick Friday fined a 48-year-old Calhoun Negro, Louis Minniefield, $300 or 90 days confinement for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating alcoholic beverages.

Minniefield also drew $50 and costs or 60 days on conviction of simple battery on the person of Nedra Minniefield.

Billy D. Robertson, 17, of route three in West Monroe, was given six months under supervised probation on a charge of simple theft.

Judge McCormick also fined four persons from $30 to $40 for public drunkenness and using loud and profane language.

Eighteen persons forfeited bonds, ranging from $3 to $30.50, on relatively minor traffic violations, while three were fined up to $50 or 30 days on similar charges.

New Bizerte Plan Offered By Bourguiba

TUNIS (AP)—Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba agreed Friday to a new basis for settlement with France on the strategic Bizerte naval base.

Bourguiba told a news conference negotiations could be held on French use of the base as long as the Berlin crisis continues. Then there should be talks on the eventual withdrawal of French troops, he said.

President Charles de Gaulle said Tuesday he desired to work out an arrangement along these lines with Tunisia.

The French have stressed that they were unable to abandon the base at a time when it might be needed in a crisis with the Soviet Union.

(In Paris, a Foreign Office spokesman said France had "taken note of the statement with interest." When a text of Bourguiba's remarks is available, he said, it would be studied with attention especially to means which can contribute to a relaxation of the situation.

Bourguiba's statement clearly was aimed at ending the seven-week old Bizerte crisis which followed the Tunisian blockade of the base and a four-day French-Tunisian battle which followed. The fighting claimed more than 1,000 Tunisian lives, according to Tunis sources. The French now occupy most of Bizerte city as well as the base.

By suggesting an agreement to permit France to keep her troops at Bizerte for the time being, Bourguiba seemed to be demonstrating his willingness to help France and the West at the time of mounting difficulties over Berlin.

Women Plead Guilty In Fraud Case

Three West Monroe women charged with defrauding the Louisiana Welfare Department of more than $10,000 pled guilty Friday in federal court here and were remanded for sentencing at a later date.

Mrs. Virginia E. Baker, 102 Halsell St., Mrs. Gladys Ann Kennedy, 1312 Bennie Breese St., and Mrs. Murel Moreau, 101 McBride St. were remanded on bond until pre-sentence investigation is made.

The trio entered pleas before Judge Ben C. Dawkins Jr., and waived right of grand jury investigation of the charges.

Mrs. Baker, former case worker and visitor for the Ouachita Parish office of the welfare department, pled guilty to 18 counts: nine counts of having "devised a fraudulent scheme to obtain welfare checks for fictitious clients", and nine counts of using the mails to carry out the scheme since 1953.

Mrs. Kennedy admitted three counts on each charge, while Mrs. Moreau pled guilty to two counts on each charge.

Federal and state money was involved.

Mrs. Baker listed fake persons in the old age category, and had checks sent out to them. Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Moreau received the checks.

Kennedys Plan To Celebrate Anniversary

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) —President Kennedy returned to Cape Cod late Friday to celebrate his eighth wedding anniversary and relax, ashore and afloat, with his wife and family.

Kennedy's Air Force jet landed at Otis Air Force Base at 6:03 p.m. EDT. He waved to the crowd, much smaller than during the tourist season, with a rolled-up newspaper.

The President boarded a helicopter for the 18-mile hop to his summer place overlooking Nantucket Sound.

Mrs. Kennedy, who has been here all summer, except for one brief trip to Washington, is staying at Hyannis Port for another week.

So the President and First Lady will observe their anniversary this weekend, a little early.

They were married Sept. 12, 1953, at Newport, R.I. The Kennedys are expected in Newport before the end of the month to spend at least one weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, mother and stepfather of Mrs. Kennedy.

This weekend was Kennedy's 11th in a row on the cape. Whenever the weather has permitted, Kennedy has gone aboard the 52-foot cruiser Marlin to relax with his family on the sound.

The President plans to return to Washington Monday morning. Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and baby John Jr. are to return the following week.

Board To Share Sewerage Costs

The Monroe City School Board, after a lively discussion with developer Dick Kellogg, yesterday voted to share its portion of the cost in revamping sewerage facilities in a school area on the south side.

With Mayor W. L. Howard sitting in on the conference, the board agreed to join with the City of Monroe, private property owners and the Ouachita Parish

Mrs. Lucky's lawyer, District Attorney Albin P. Lassiter, had filed two motions, one asking for the jury trial, and the other asking for a copy of the FBI report.

Dawkins said that he will check over the report within 30 days, to make sure it does not reveal FBI methods of operation vital to the security of this country, before turning it over to Mrs. Lucky.

He also said that trial will not be held before February due to a backlog of other cases.

The U. S. Justice Department is charging Mrs. Lucky with discrimination in removing several thousand names of Negro voters from the registration rolls in 1955-56, on grounds of failure to vote moving without changing address and other technicalities.

The conviction led a relatively light docket, which also saw City Judge W. M. Harper hand down 60 days compulsory sentence to Negro Willie Spears for trespassing. Spears, 20, of 1106 Louise avenue, also drew $50 or 30 days conviction for simple battery. Noles pressed were charged against Aubrey Reed, 28, of 1401 2nd Ave., and Eugene Stickle, 30, of 363 Stone. Reed was held on a peace warrant, while Stickle was charged with the illegal use of a weapon.

“There was the same number of whites challenged in Ouachita parish as Negroes,” and the report now show this, the Judge exclaims.

Attizhuz Wilson, federal attorney, made a statement in court pointing out that the facts of the case were presented to a federal grand jury, but that the jury saw no need to take action and did not issue any indictments.

Mrs. Lucky and the Ouachita Parish Citizens Council had received the mail from the master. Several members of the Council are charged with her.

Four Council members who specifically made the jury trial request were Rev. H. L. Driskell, J. H. Birdson, Sr., Wesley I. Birdne and Billy Adams.

W. L. Brooks, 23 year old Negro, No. 5, Toney's Alley, was fined $100 or 60 days for reckless driving.

In other action, bonds were forfeited in 19 minor traffic cases and fines levied against seven others convicted of similar offenses.

Voice Of Broadway

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Betty Hutton's latest marriage (to Pete Candoli) is at the tempestuous stage . . . Jackie Gleason is discussing a legit version of "Barnum" which he would direct and in which Orson Welles would star. Just as long as they don't try to get through the same doorway at the same time) . . . Tuesday Weld's chums think she's serious about becoming Mrs. Gary Lockwood — although he and his wife are supposedly around Christmas time.

Oh, come on! The final budget for "Mutiny On The Bounty" is reported to be $19,300,000. Marilyn Monroe and Joe Di Maggio didn't check into any of the San Francisco hotels for their visit to that delightful city. They've been staying with Joe's sister Margaret in the Di Maggio house on Beach St.

Sophia Loren's salary has tripled since her fabulous success in "Two Women." She now gets as much as $600,000 per film.

Quite a switch for an actress who not long ago was considered death incarnate. At least two movie companies lost a fortune when they cast her as a Hollywood glamour girl, but her decision to her original earthy beauty in the Italian prize-winner has made her one of the most sought-after — and expensive — performers in the business. Directors of Tennessee Williams are depressed by the report that he has almost lost the sight of one eye.

Broadway quiz questions: What Broadway company, which was touring on the edge of bankruptcy, has been saved by a cash infusion emanating from Las Vegas? A comedian Jonathan Winters? Did former movie queen Veronica Lake get married and married not long ago?

What about the Waldorf Astoria dinner Robert Moses was supposed to toss for Mayor Wagner in the 1950s? Is it on or off the menu?

Is Andy Williams thinking of switching from his singing to acting? When he does, will he be a professional? Will he sing "I Need A Girl" with George Hamilton? Will he sing "I Need A Girl" with George Hamilton? Will he sing "I Need A Girl" with George Hamilton?

From the movie "The Hustler" was a soft drink and a glass of champagne when she was the wifely-eyed partner in the game. Margaret and Walter Reade at a gala preview of "The Hustler" on Sept. 12. Non-actors will be able to view the scenes by the artistic husband, Jack Ackerman, the hot bongo player at the Metropole, is counting Dorothy Winchell, ex-wife of Joe Pasternak, who plans to produce "The Mario Lanza Story" for the screen. Want a young man known for the lead — a chap who looks like Mario, but is slim, Joe, baby, if he is slim he won't look like Mario, and you've shot your conflict right away. Dieting for the cameras was Lanza's greatest problem in life.

HANS B., a young German, smokes cigarette in a West Berlin refugee camp after his daring escape from the Soviet zone of Berlin Friday. Police withheld his last name to protect relatives. Hans drove a small car past guards and through barbed wire and wooden barriers at Brandenburg Gate, on sector border. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Berlin)

WINS FREEDOM BID

East Berlin Driver Crashes Barricade

BERLIN (AP)—A young East Berlin truck driver from a Communist family crashed through the heavily guarded Brandenburg Gate Friday in the most spectacular Berlin escape since the Reds shut the border nearly a month ago.

Plucky Hans Boehm, 22, gunned his state-owned delivery truck through a wooden barrier at 60 miles an hour and swept past flabbergasted Communist guards clustered at the stone gate columns with shoot-to-kill orders.

With motor racing, the truck strained against the last barbed wire barricade and burst through into the British sector and safety.

"I didn't want to live under communism any more," Boehm declared. "I figured breaking through the Brandenburg Gate was the easiest way out."

But five other East Germans, trying an equally bold break across the Iron Curtain into West Germany, were less fortunate. Their bid failed and cost a life.

It happened Thursday night at Marienborn, at the west end of the 110-mile highway that links Berlin with the West.

Witnesses at Helmstedt, on the west side of the border at Marienborn, said the five smashed their truck through two rows of barriers at the Communist checkpoint. Then, before they could make it across, they hit an automobile, killing one passenger and injuring another.

The five were arrested and led away by East German Communist police at gun point. Boehm's daring dash through the Brandenburg Gate, symbol both of German unity and division, was the most unusual escape so far through the walls and barbed wire along the sector border.

Oh, come on! The final budget for "Mutiny on The Bounty" is reported to be $19,300,000. Marilyn Monroe and Joe Di Maggio didn't check into any of the San Francisco hotels for their visit to that delightful city. They've been staying with Joe's sister Marie in the Di Maggio house on Beach St.

Sophia Loren's salary has tripled since her fabulous success in "Two Women." She now gets as much as $600,000 per film — quite a switch for an actress who not long ago was considered death at the box offices. At least two major movie companies lost a fortune when they cast her as a Hollywood glamor girl, but her reversion to her original earthy self in the Italian prize-winner has made her one of the most sought-after — and expensive — performers in the business. . . . Admirers of Tennessee Williams are distressed by the report that he has almost lost the sight of one eye.

Many of the cafe comedians who revived their World War II draft routines have dropped them in short order. It seems that this time around, Americans don't think war is funny.

Tony Franciosa and Judy Kan-bor (Barney Balaban's daughter) will marry in New York in February. East Berlin Driver Crashes Barricade

BERLIN (AP)—A young East Berlin truck driver from a Communist family crashed through the heavily guarded Brandenburg Gate Friday in the most spectacular Berlin escape since the Reds shut the border nearly a month ago.

Plucky Hans Boehm, 22 gunned his state-owned delivery truck through a wooden barrier at 60 miles an hour and swept past flabbergasted Communist guards clustered at the stone gate columns with shoot-to-kill orders.

With motor racing, the truck strained against the last barbed wire barricade and burst through into the British sector and safety.

"I didn't want to live under communism any more," Boehm declared. "I figured breaking through the Brandenburg Gate was the easiest way out."

But five other East Germans trying an equally bold break across the Iron Curtain into West Germany were less fortunate. Their bid failed and cost a life.

It happened Thursday night at Marienborn, at the west end of the 110-mile highway that links Berlin with the West.

Witnesses at Helmstedt, on the west side of the border at Marienborn, said the five smashed their truck through two rows of barriers at the Communist checkpoint. Then, before they could make it across, they hit an automobile, killing one passenger and injuring another.

The five were arrested and led away by East German Communist people's police at gun point.

Boehm's daring dash through the Brandenburg Gate, symbol both of German unity and division, was the most unusual escape so far through the walls and barbed wire along the sector border.

PLACED UNDER CURFEW DUNOON, Scotland (UPI)—Sailors of the U.S. Polaris submarine base at Holy Loch were placed under an 11 p.m. curfew Friday because they were staying out too late and looking bleary-eyed in the morning.

Naval sources said the clamp-down followed a series of incidents in which sailors from the atomic submarine tender U.S.S. Proteus on dates with Dunoon lassies missed the last "liberty boat" from Srdnadam Pier.
